CROWD URGED TO TAKE PART IN TOWN FETE

Colville and May to Lead Delegation to New Holland Wednesday

OPENS CENTENNIAL

Band and Drum Corps to Lead City's Parade

Robert G. Colville, county treasurer, and Attorney Charles H. May, a former resident of New Holland, will be in charge of "Circleville Night" at the New Holland celebration Wednesday.

All local civic organizations have been asked to have representatives in the delegation to accompany the Circleville high school band and the American Legion drum corps.

Mr. May has been named to give a brief address representing Circleville citizens. Mr. May plans to place on exhibit at the celebration a map, 60 years old, showing New Holland when it contained about 15 acres of land including 58 city lots. The city is now a mile square. New Holland was originally settled at Flemmingsburg, in 1818, and incorporated in 1835.

The program each evening during the centennial will start at 7 p. m. The concerts and entertainment features of visiting delegations will be held between 7:30 p. m. and 8:30 p. m. The village will present a floor show at 8:30 and 10:30 p. m. Dancing will be held each evening on the village square.

2 FARMERS START ON CORN-CUTTING

The thud of sharp steel against heavy corn echoed in two fields in Jackson-twp early this morning. Two farmers opened the 1935 corn-cutting season.

The cutting started on the farms of John Stevenson and John Grubbs, Circleville Rt. 5. Stevenson reported "the corn was exceptionally good considering the punishment it had received from heavy rains and wind storms." He said some of the corn was down and difficult to cut.

Most farmers believe they will not start cutting before about two weeks as the crop will be later than usual due to the abnormal rainfall which has kept the corn from properly maturing. They hope for fair and warm weather to mature the crop before frost. Despite the unusual weather this summer the corn is reported well cared and heavy.

The price for cutting is expected to average from 12 to 15 cents a shock, the farmers believed, on a 14-hill square.

TRIAL OF RIFFLE DELAYED BY COURT

The trial of Harry Riffle, county dog warden, on a charge of unlawfully killing a dog July 13 owned by Dean Godden, Deer-creek-twp, tentatively set for Sept. 10, was postponed until a later date.

The case of Robert Smith, Laurelville, indicted on a charge of cutting with intent to wound, has been set for Sept. 30. Judge J. W. Adkins said the Riffle case will probably follow the Smith case.

These two cases are the only ones set for trial out of the recent arraignment following the county grand jury report.

MAIL CARRIER'S ESTATE $37,216

The estate of Charles W. Bock, retired mail carrier late of South Bloomfield, is valued at $37,216.92 in an inventory and appraisal on file in probate court Tuesday.

The inventory lists $55,891.92 in stocks and securities, $300 in real estate and $25 in personal goods. E. W. Seeds, Fred R. Nicholas and J. D. Hummel were appraisers.

SENATOR LONG, HIS WIFE, TWO SONS AND DAUGHTER.

Recent photographs show Senator Huey Long of Louisiana, who was shot down by a political avenger, and his wife, two sons and daughter. In the group at left at the piano are Mrs. Rose Long, daughter Lolita and son Palmer Long. Senator Long and his son Russell are shown at right in a picture taken a few months ago in the national capital.

INTEND TO INTER LONG AT CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Senator Huey P. Long will be buried on the grounds of the Louisiana state capital, according to present plans, which were communicated to Washington today.

Seymour Weiss, close personal friend of the dead senator, telephoned the Washington Times from Baton Rouge this morning that the legislature would meet in joint session there tomorrow morning and pass resolutions permitting the burial on the capital grounds.

Weiss said the body will lie in state in the capital tomorrow and until 4 p. m. Thursday, when the funeral services will be held. The pallbearers will be:

Gov. Oscar K. Allen, Lt. Gov. James B. Norr, Commissioner of Conservation Robert S. Maestri, Gilmer McConnell, Mrs. Long's brother, Supreme Court Justice John B. Fornet, and Col. Weiss.

SHERIFF'S WIDOW BRINGS COUNTY SUIT

LIMA, Sept. 10.—Alleging that Sheriff Jesse L. Sarber was "lynched" by a "mob" on the night of October 12, 1933 when gangsters killed him and liberated the notorious John Dillinger from the Allen county jail, Mrs. Lucy Sarber, his widow, today filed a $8,000 damage suit in common pleas court here, naming the county commissioners defendants.

The action is one of the first of its kind in Ohio. It is based on section 6278 of the general code.

(Special to The Herald)

COLUMBUS, Sept. 10.—Pickaway-county recipients of Ohio Old Age pensions will not receive their checks for August payments, it was learned today at the State Auditor's office.

In Pickaway-co there are 678 persons on the pension list, receiving an average award of $12.38.

The total needed to complete the August payments was estimated by Henry J. Berroddin, chief of the pension division, as approximately $350,000. Besides those

An illness of six months caused the death Monday afternoon in Columbus of Mrs. Margaret Ellen Kirkpatrick, aged 77, mother of Ross Kirkpatrick and Mrs. Edwin Bach, of this city.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick died at the home of another daughter, Mrs. Wilbur Adkins, 1462 Kingry-st.

The funeral will be Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Bach, 623 S. Court-st., with Rev. Herman A. Sayre officiating with interment in Forest cemetery by M. S. Rinehart. Pall bearers will be Roy and Dave James, Edwin Bach, Wilbur Adkins, Ross Kirkpatrick, and Charles Kirkpatrick.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was born in Pike-co June 2, 1860, to David and Charlotte Beauchamp James. She was married to Charles H. Kirkpatrick Oct. 2, 1879.

The husband and three children survive.

TWO ENTER PRISONS

Charles Elkins, Harisburg, was taken to the Ohio penitentiary, and Harry Shull, Huntington, W. Va., to the Mansfield reformatory Tuesday morning by Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

Elkins was sentenced to one to twenty years for cutting with intent to wound and Shull received the reformatory sentence for auto theft before Judge J. W. Adkins last week.

DEATH TAKES THREAT FROM PATH OF FDR

Louisiana Senator Had Planned to Enter Presidential Contest

LED INSURGENTS

Third Party Move Left Without Leader

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The death of Senator Huey Long removes the principal threat of a major third party movement in the presidential campaign of 1936.

There may be—probably will be—an insurgent ticket in the field next year, but without the leadership of the volatile, rabble-rousing Kingfish politicians do not believe it will get very far. It was Huey who was the spearhead, the motivating spirit of the insurgent wing of both old parties, and with his elimination there doesn't appear on the horizon anyone who can carry on.

Ready to Join Race

Huey planned to run for the presidency next year. He said publicly that if the Democrats renominated Mr. Roosevelt and the Republicans ran Mr. Hoover "I'll be a candidate." He said privately that he was going to be a candidate in any event, irrespective of the Democratic and Republican choices. He made one exception. He said if the Republicans nominated Senator William E. Borah of Idaho he would support him.

The nucleus of Huey's third party, as he planned it, was first of all his own followers, secondly, those of Father Coughlin, the Detroit radio priest, and thirdly those who subscribed to the philosophy of Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the aging California physician, who brought out the novel idea that the federal government should pay $200 a month to all persons who passed the age of sixty.

Headed Share Wealth

Huey's own political tom-tom was "Share the Wealth," and "Every Man a King." Father Coughlin's was, and is, radical monetary reform. Dr. Townsend's

"Most Regrettable," Declares Coughlin

ALBANY, Sept. 10.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, noted radio priest, declared here today that the death of Senator Huey Long "is the most regrettable thing in modern history."

Father Coughlin passed through Albany on his way to Great Barrington, Mass.

"No matter how bitter our animosity may be," said Father Coughlin, "in a democracy such as ours we should never have recourse to bullets to settle political disputes. Our motto must always be 'ballots, not bullets'."

Need Hand To Guide Louisiana

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 10.—Senator Huey P. Long's death at the hands of a fanatical assassin leaves Louisiana with not a single strong hand to guide the helm of state.

What the fate of the political empire Huey carved out of the bayou mucklands into a thing wonderful to behold will be, was raised as a major enigma by the senator's murder.

Huey Long, true to the mold of the dictator, was a man who would brook no counter authority. His political appointees were his men, to have and to command. He demanded implicit, unswerving obedience. He picked his men not for strength of character and high ability. Many actually gained favor because of their mediocrity.

Allen Not Trained

With few exceptions no man in his party, not even the governor, who notoriously never issued a command or uttered an opinion without first consulting Long, has had training in decisive action or leadership.

In these exceptions may lie the future continuance of the power Long holds in Louisiana, a power absolute in the political sphere, by virtue of constitutional amendments that have been reeled off with machine-gun-like rapidity by a willing legislature in special session.

FIVE TRANSFUSIONS FAIL TO SAVE LIFE

Family and Men He Made Powers in State in Hospital Room at End; Governor Allen and Members of Bodyguard in Tears; Family Remains Calm.

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 10.—Grim, relentless fighter to the end, United States Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, who acknowledged no man his better, lost his final battle today. Death was the victor.

Marked down by the bullet of an erratic-brained assassin—the death he confided to friends he most feared—Louisiana's phenomenal political figure died here shortly before dawn today as a heavy rain slashed the dark skies.

Death stole into the hushed, cloistered quiet of Our Lady of the Lake sanitarium, Catholic hospital, that nestles in the shadow of the mammoth $7,000,000 sky-scraper capitol Long erected as a monument to his regime, shortly after 4 a. m. C. S. T.

Unconscious Four Hours

Four hours before, with every aid of science, a staff of 17 physicians, and his own stubborn determination, battling courageously, but to little avail, the red-headed boy from Winnfield parish who became a modern dictator in his own particular realm of American democracy, lapsed into unconsciousness.

He died in a coma, but surrounded by loving friends, nearly 100 of the men he had made powers in the Louisiana commonwealth, his closest advisers, and his family, summoned hastily as the tenuous thread of life edged away, surrounded him as he quietly passed away.

His beautiful wife, and their three lovely children, Rose, twenty, Russell, sixteen, and Palmer, twelve were at the bedside.

As the battle to save the senator's life closed in death, the members of his husky bodyguard, who loved this strange American political boss with the adored affection of a puppy for its master who whipped out guns and saw Doctor Carl Weiss, Jr., young eye specialist, on the spot, when he fired the fatal bullet through Long's body, wept piteously.

Gov. Allen Breaks Down

Governor Oscar Allen, Long's highway commissioner when the senator was governor, a boyhood friend to whom Long gave the governorship when he went to Washington as senator, broke down.

"Tears streaming from his eyes," the governor with Abe Simmons, New Orleans capitalist, brought news of the senator's death to reporters who had kept patient vigil throughout the night.

Long's chief bodyguard, swarthy, powerful Joe Messina, and his secretary, Earl Christensen, wept freely.

Mrs. Long and the three children, held their control courageously. They were dry eyed but had to be supported to an awaiting automobile. Shushan announced at 4:10 a. m. that the senator had passed away several minutes earlier.

Greeted His Wife

Shortly before midnight Mrs. Long was in the room, the senator, in a moment of returning consciousness, saw her, and a smile lighting his wan face, said "Oh, my sweetheart."

He reached up and kissed her hand and asked for the children. Mrs. Long left the room and the senator then spoke of the university and its students, his words bore evidence that he realized the end was near.

"I wonder what will become of those boys and girls," he said.

When Mrs. Long returned with the children, the senator was unconscious. He last saw the children yesterday morning. He remained in a coma until death.

Death came, but only after the greatest battle of his amazing, tempestuous career.

Five times the spark of life dimmed to a tiny glow as Long, his abdomen pierced and intestines punctured, lay since Sunday night.

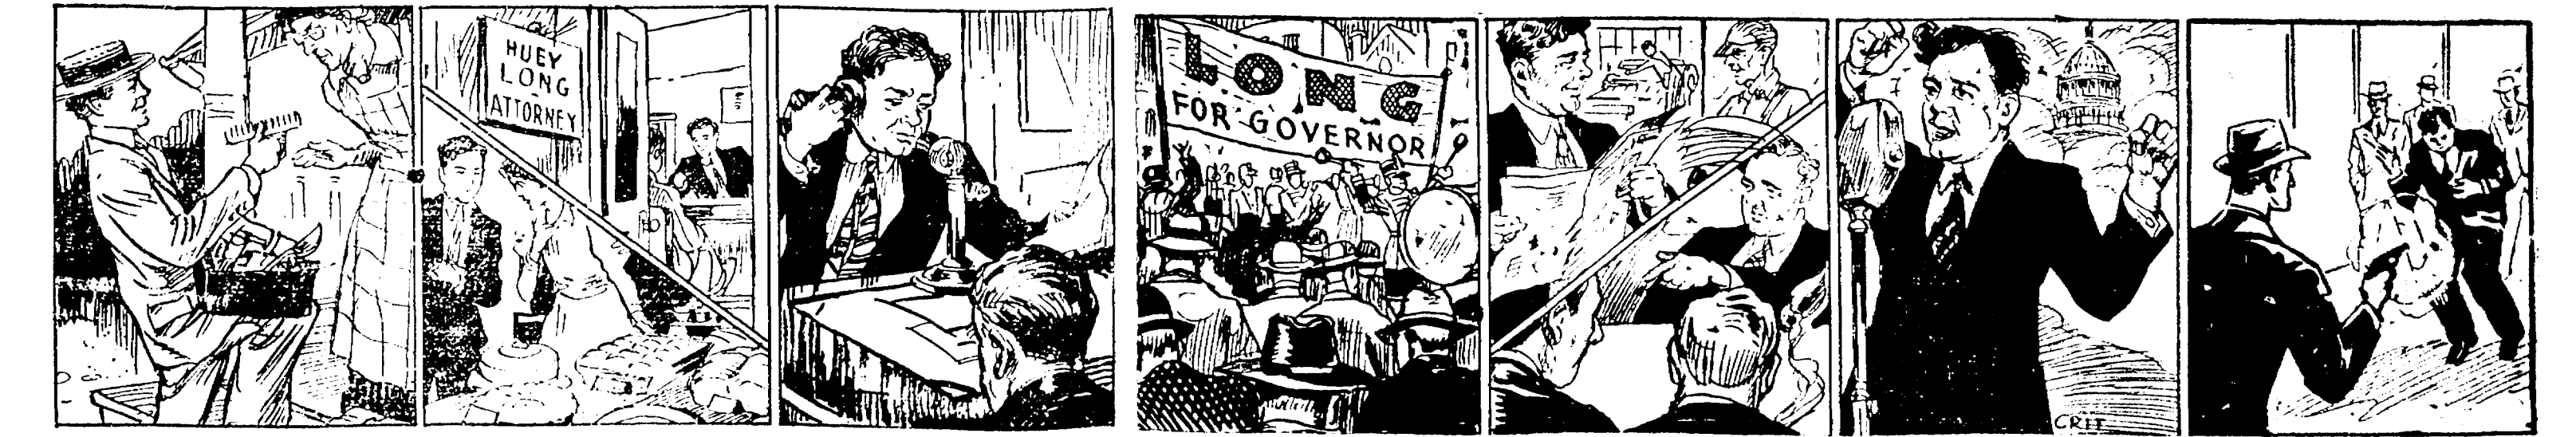

Five times the blood of his prayerful political friends, who volunteered by the scores, flowed into his veins to whip the spark back into flame. The last time it gleamed momentarily, then winked out.

Long fought gamely to the end, aided by his amazing nervous vitality.

Surgeons resorted to blood transfusions three times in five hours

Life Story of Huey Long Portrayed in Sketches

Huey P. Long was born at Winnfield, La., Aug. 30, 1893. As a boy of seven he began working on his father's farm and then neighboring plantations, at 25 cents a day. At 13 he sold schoolbooks and at 16 he became a traveling salesman, selling various articles from door to door.

Meanwhile young Huey acquired a high school education and studied law at Oklahoma and Tulane universities. He was admitted to the state bar at 20. Huey met Miss Rose McConnell through a baking contest he organized and married her three years later at the age of 20.

Huey induced the state supreme court to speed the process by which he could practice before it and opened an office at Winnfield. In 1918 Long ran for his first political office, state railroad commissioner, defeating four opponents after a grueling campaign.

While a member of the Louisiana public service commission in 1924, he decided to run for governor. He was defeated, but ran again four years later and received 140,000 votes, a huge majority in his state. An effort to impeach him in 1929 failed and was later abandoned.

Criticized by virtually every newspaper in Louisiana shortly after he became governor, Long established his own weekly and used handbills freely.

By the time Huey was elected to the United States senate in 1931 he called himself "Kingfish" and was virtual dictator of Louisiana.

A supporter of President Roosevelt shortly before his nomination for the presidency, Long soon broke with the administration. Deprived of all federal patronage Huey bitterly attacked the New Deal and President Roosevelt with an eye on the White House for himself.

While leaving a special session of the Louisiana legislature, called to enact measures increasing Long's power, the senator was shot in the abdomen in the state capitol. His assassin, Dr. Carl Weiss, Jr., son-in-law of a political enemy, was slain by Long's bodyguard.

Governor Allen, through tears and with trembling voice, made a brief official statement.

"Senator Long's death will be a terrific blow to the state," he said. "His loss is irreparable and will be mourned throughout the nation."

Long's last words and thoughts were of his family and the boys and girls of Louisiana State university. Long raised the state university from a third rate institution to one of the foremost in the south, he was proud of its football team and accompanied it on famous jaunts. While a member of the Louisiana public service commission in 1924, he decided to run for governor. He was defeated, but ran again four years later and received 140,000 votes, a huge majority in his state. An effort to impeach him in 1929 failed and was later abandoned.

Criticized by virtually every newspaper in Louisiana shortly after he became governor, Long established his own weekly and used handbills freely. By the time Huey was elected to the United States senate in 1931 he called himself "Kingfish" and was virtual dictator of Louisiana.

A supporter of President Roosevelt shortly before his nomination for the presidency, Long soon broke with the administration. Deprived of all federal patronage Huey bitterly attacked the New Deal and President Roosevelt with an eye on the White House for himself.

While leaving a special session of the Louisiana legislature, called to enact measures increasing Long's power, the senator was shot in the abdomen in the state capitol. His assailant, Dr. Carl Weiss, Jr., son-in-law of a political enemy, was slain by Long's bodyguard.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS HAS MONTHLY SESSION

The September meeting of Mrs. Marion's Sunday school class of the Methodist Episcopal church was held Monday evening in the church basement.

A short business session was conducted by the president, Miss Virginia Nelson, during which plans were made for a covered-dish dinner at 6:30 o'clock at the next regular meeting.

Monday Club Has First Meeting of Year

The Monday club held its first meeting of the year last evening in the library trustees' room in Memorial hall at which time Mrs. Hildebrand Jones, outgoing president, presented the gavel to Mrs. D. Adrain Yates, the new president.

Mrs. Yates responded with a few appropriate remarks. After a short business session the program was presented.

The subject of the Monday club program this year is Spain and last night's program was in charge of Mrs. Charles Gilmore, chairman of the History-Government department.

Miss Emily Yates, whose subject was "The Land" discussed the topographical contours of Spain. It is the land of green valleys, boundless plains, barren mountains, few lakes and no navigable rivers. Madrid the capital is in the same latitude as Columbus, O. and Rome, Italy. The climate of the country varies so greatly that wheat, barley, olives and grapes are all grown in its boundaries. Spain is rich in all minerals especially coal, but none of these natural resources have been highly developed due to the indifference of the people. In closing, Miss Yates stated that enough saltpeter for ammunition is found in the province of Madrid to blow up the whole world.

Mrs. Emmitt Crist discussed the people of Spain, tracing their origins and civilizations from the earliest times especially stressing the great influence of the Moors. The Spaniard of today is a descendant of the Celtic, Roman, Teutonic and Moslem invaders of Spain. The chief racial characteristics of the Spanish people are shortness and darkness.

The temperament, traditions and climatic conditions all combine to render uncongenial the gospel of work for the love of it, and the Spaniard prefers to limit his wants rather than increase his labors. He has a great love for formality, ceremony and ritual as exemplified in the bull fight. Spain was once a great world power but it is extremely doubtful if ever again it will be a potent factor in world affairs.

Covers at the dinner were laid for Mrs. Sensenbrenner, Miss Riffle, Mrs. West, Mrs. C. G. Chalfin, Mrs. John Carle, Mrs. Fred Donnelly, Miss Ann English and Mrs. John Bolender.

to save his life. He was almost constantly in an oxygen tent, but rallies proved will of the wisps, brief and flitting.

Abandoned Hope
The senator's life was despaired early Monday night, though kept a close secret. For over eight hours, surgeons battled and Long's own determination kept the tenuous thread of life together.

Long had told friends he would live Sunday night after he was cut down by the small steel packeted pellet from a small Belgian made automatic pistol, wielded by the hand of the mad young doctor, who was obsessed with the idea of riding Louisiana of an oppressor.

But last night he knew the end was near and had his immediate family and friends summoned to bid them farewell.

Long's body will lie in state in the capitol. Funeral plans were not immediately completed.

The first transfusion was made after the operation that followed the attempt on his life Sunday night.

Weiss stepped from the shadows of a lofty column as Long walked to an elevator after putting the finishing touches Sunday night on the first session of another extraordinary legislative call to strengthen further an iron-fisted grip on the Louisiana electoral, financial and political machinery. He stepped forward with a drawn .32-calibre automatic fired once, but as the steel-jacketed bullet plunged through Long's body, Weiss fell to the floor, slayed by 62 bullets from quickly drawn guns of the senator's bodyguard.

Second Early Monday
The second transfusion followed early Monday morning. Dr. Arthur Vidrine announced the senator had rallied in a bulletin at 4:45 a. m., Monday.

Then for anxious hours no official word came from the hospital. Rumors, denied by Christenberry, Senator Long's secretary, persisted that Long was dying.

Shortly before midnight Monday, a third transfusion was performed as Senator Long sank rapidly.

The blood of Dr. Willard Ellender, brother of speaker of the house, Alvin Ellender, matched and he gave his blood in the third transfusion.

Tanks of oxygen were rushed to the operating room three times in rapid succession in an hour's time.

Dr. Clarence Lorio made the blood tests and performed the transfusion.

The senator's temperature before the transfusion had risen to 106. His pulse had sagged to 90. With the new blood coursing through his veins, and the revivifying effect of the oxygen, the pulse went up again to 118, the reading two hours earlier.

The transfusion was pronounced a success and Dr. Rufus Jackson said he was encouraged because the senator had shown improvement from 10 to 12 but that the best he could give him was a "one in five chance."

After the third oxygen ministrations, attaches said Long regained consciousness, recognized the huge figure of Governor Allen towering near the operating table, grinned wanly through pale lips, and commanded:

"Oscar, stand back there, and don't look so glum."

Pass More Bills
While Long lay dying, his legislature continued to grind out perfunctory action on a batch of new bills.

One is aimed at consolidation of court districts to wipe out district judges opposing the Long regime.

The father-in-law of the dead Dr. Weiss, Judge Benjamin H. Pavy, of Opelousas, is one of the targets of the redistricting move.

The house met at 10 a. m. Monday, and the senate held a brief session at 8 p. m., the sessions were occupied by reading of bills, sponsored by Long, with virtually no opposition to their passage.

One bill approved by the house, aimed at President Roosevelt, would provide jail terms for federal officers exercising "unconstitutional" powers in the state.

This measure is aimed as reprisal for Roosevelt taking control of relief agencies from Long's hands and placing it under authority of anti-Longers.

sions at a clip of a half dozen yearly.

Or it may mean the ruin of Huey's empire.

Will a strong hand arise from the party, and take over the reins that slipped from the grasp of this phenomenal figure of the American political arena when death came shortly before dawn today, or will Long's singular contribution to the history of political machination unparalleled fall to pieces of its own weight, with the single supporting beam gone?

Or will rival chieftains tear the Long machine apart in outbreak of internecine warfare over the spoils?

These questions filled the speculative mind in Louisiana today, even as the state prepared to pay reverence to the dead statesman.

Ends 7-Year Reign
Senator Long's death slammed the gates down on a seven year dictatorship, begun when a young upstart state railroad commissioner became governor.

Senator Long turned one of the shrewdest, adept and active minds in American political history to bear on the problem of gaining complete mastery of his state.

First governor, he became the Cardinal Richelieu of the American political scene, stepping into the senate with an electoral machinery that couldn't fail, and setting up a puppet governor and legislature to control at will.

But, unlike Richelieu, who moved in silent and devious ways, Long took boyish delight in amazing pranks that kept his name in headlines constantly.

to save his life. He was almost constantly in an oxygen tent, but rallies proved will o' the wisps, brief and flitting.

Abandoned Hope

The senator's life was despaired early Monday night, though kept a close secret. For over eight hours, surgeons battled and Long's own determination kept the tenuous thread of life together.

Long had told friends he would live Sunday night after he was cut down by the small steel packeted pellet from a small Belgian made automatic pistol, wielded by the mad young doctor, who was obsessed with the idea of riding Louisiana of an oppressor.

But last night he knew the end was near and had his immediate family and friends summoned to bid them farewell.

Long's body will lie in state in the capitol. Funeral plans were not immediately completed.

The first transfusion was made after the operation that followed the attempt on his life Sunday night.

Weiss stepped from the shadows of a lofty column as Long walked to an elevator after putting the finishing touches Sunday night on the first session of another extraordinary legislative call to strengthen further an iron-fisted grip on the Louisiana electoral, financial and political machinery. THE CITY PARK PROJECT
(An Editorial)

TWO MONTHS AGO Circleville was enthused about a city park. A number of progressive-minded citizens interested themselves in the project, collected money, and secured FERA aid for its construction.

Today, if some immediate steps are not taken to revive this interest and a few more dollars collected to make the park a sure, financial success, the project is doomed to failure.

The Herald regrets to see the park project fail at this time because we feel that if Circleville doesn't build a park now, it will be many years before such a project is realized.

Leaders of the project have worked unceasingly to see their dream realized. Right now they're just $400 short of their $3,500 goal - the amount needed to purchase the site on Watt-st.

We understand that the city's business men for the most part have failed to respond to the plea for park funds. Some of them, and other residents, able to give, say they are withholding their contributions until the park is "a going concern." May we suggest that the park can't be "a going concern" if sufficient financial backing isn't first of all assured.

Every progressive city of Circleville's size either has a park or is making plans to build one. Circleville's children have never had a properly organized recreational center at which they might spend part of their leisure time. A park for Circleville would be a definite contribution to a finer type of physically, mentally, morally-trained youth.

Let's make the park project a success! Those of us who haven't fulfilled our pledges, do so at once. The rest of us, who haven't given, should do so now!

TO HONOR LAST SURVIVOR

It is somewhat early yet to prepare for a personal bicentenary to be celebrated in 1937, but the occasion for which congress is arranging is one of unusual importance. September 19, 1937, will mark the 200th anniversary of Charles Carroll, the last survivor of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Very properly the initiative for the approaching commemoration is in the hands of Senator Tydings of Maryland, the state from which Carroll hailed.

In appending his signature, "Charles Carroll of Carrollton," to the immortal document, this great man pledged not only his life and sacred honor but also the largest fortune in America to the success of the Revolution. He was held in high respect by George Washington and to the end of his days was revered by admiring fellow-countrymen for his zeal, fortitude and perseverance in his country's cause.

The Maryland Historical Society promises an observance two years hence which will attract the attention of the entire country.

You can tell a hen-pecked husband. He stands silent and miserable while his wife bawls out somebody.

Alas! If he has brains enough to make a good public official, he probably has money enough to make voters suspicious.

It was indeed a shock for the world to discover that the Ethiopian in the woodpile was none other than our old friend, Standard Oil.

Russia's fine-spun distinction between the communist party and the soviet government doesn't satisfy Secretary Hull, who knows a red herring when he sees one.

Hitler's slaves must eat more rhubarb, it is decreed, and may they get the bellyache.

Something for nothing: Joe Louis' share of the loot in the forthcoming Baer fight.

Motorists who drive into trees probably don't giveadam, but something must be done to save the trees.

The ultimate in faith is to get an unusually big electric bill and still believe the meter is right.

Feeding strikers at public expense isn't a new idea. Aren't the farmers paid for not working?

Now the big problem of Democracy is to keep people from judging it by its crack-pot friends.

X-ray Found Most Useful In the Treatment of Acne

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE AUTHORITATIVE review of the subject of acne (that eruption so common on the face in young people) before one of our most learned medical societies (proceeding in the form of a symposium) was held in the city of Chicago, after an evening devoted to the study of the subject. The speaker, Dr. Logan Clendening, of Chicago, who has been for many years one of the most successful in the treatment of acne, stated that X-ray was the most useful treatment for this disease.

Dr. Clendening

Acne is a disease of the skin, and then a small bump on the skin—usually marked by a small black dot—the blackhead or comedo. This may or may not become infected, with the formation of pus.

Comedo Readily Understood

These comedos can be readily understood if we realize that they form at the tip of one of the glands which supply oil to the skin. During puberty, with the development of the reproductive glands, their secretion causes the skin cells at the mouth of these glands to increase and eventually block the greasy secretion back into the cavity of the gland, the core of the bump referred to. This occurs in all young people, but is more active in those subject to acne.

All this makes us realize that acne is due to a number of factors, and treatment must take them all into account. It is a combination of local and general changes—local in skin and general in the secretions or nutrition of the body.

Under local treatment, the important thing is to relieve the comedo early, which may be done by squeezing out the secretion with a comedo extractor, cleaning the skin to remove the excess fat and grease, and the use of such drugs as sulphur and resorcin in lotions and ointments has always been valuable and in mild cases, except for relapses, curative.

Under general measures, the use of vaccines, ductless glands, vitamins, and diet food in sugars and fats, have all been tried with varying success. Treatment directed towards constipation, the disorders of puberty, and a general tonic, are also included.

From the amount of work being done, we may hope that the problem of this common disease, which, in spite of its universality has never been completely solved, is on that road now.

THE DEVIL'S MANSION
By REX JARDIN

CHAPTER 43

THE VOICE had said she never would see Blair any more—and that only if she married this unknown person speaking in the dark would Blair be permitted to depart alive.

Never see Blair any more! Ridiculous that she loved him so short a time, thought she. Ridiculous. Surely love could not come so quickly!

Janet had had little experience with love. The years she had spent with her father had brought no love to her. She had had no time for love. And the years after were busy years. Men in her office, yes. Plenty of them; men who seemed attracted to her, but were frightened by her seriousness, by the duty she had put forward for herself. Janet had not yet learned how to play.

"How will I know that you'll keep your promise?" The question came slowly, hesitantly. Though his spoken words.

The answer came readily. "I'll direct Rodman to his car, and let him go. After he goes, we'll go. I've already arranged to have a car come for us from Vancouver. It will be here around midnight. Nita may stay in the house. I'll provide for her. She may have the house if she wants it. We'll never return here. She'll take care of the body in the east tower room. In case you do not believe I have a car coming from Vancouver, I'll tell you that I have my own direct telephone line here, which is located some miles from the house. I receive no incoming calls."

"I must have more proof of your promise than that."

A moment of silence and the voice continued. "I'll let you give Rodman directions to the car, but I'll be near you to hear everything you say. His car is within the gate, on the right hand side of the road. It is concealed about fifty feet in, on a hidden road... a road that is marked by two tall trees at the entrance. It's easy to find. The car is in running order. Will you go now to the stable? You'd better take a light."

"And Rajah?"

"I'll whistle for Rajah. He'll stay inside with me."

Janet found some matches on the table, and lighted a candle. Her hands were steady and she was much calmer now. She had promised to see willingly with this man she had never seen willingly. Nita had said he was not like other men.

Willingly with this mad man, who had talked to her just now...

Holding the candle high above her head, she went out the back door, and found herself in the garden. The white flowers on Miss Boiesvain's grave were faintly visible in the moonlight.

Quickly she went around the house and saw the big stable ahead of her. A snarl greeted her. Rajah was all there, but he made no move toward her.

"Mr. Rodman!" she called softly.

"Yes?" Her bravery left her for an instant when she heard his voice, eager and excited. She could not see him, but she made out something white high up. The bandage around his head...

"Miss Lord... Janet, I've been waiting for you to come! Oh! The hours have dragged!"

"Your car I found out is within the gate, just a little way on the right hand side of the road... hidden in a road marked by two tall trees..." Janet spoke swiftly. She was about to go on, when she heard a shrill whistle behind her... the whistle she knew came from Rajah's master. She looked back, but could see nothing. Then Rajah bounded past her, round the house, and she heard the kitchen door open. Maurice was in the house, standing at one of the back windows she was sure.

"You can go now... Rajah won't bother you. He has gone in..."

The sliding of bolts, and Blair ran to her side.

"Is it safe for us, Janet?" he panted.

"Safe for you... but I can't go yet. Wait down in Boiesvain for me. I'll manage to get there..."

"I can't go without you!"

"You must! Otherwise I can't get away!"

"I don't understand..."

"Quickly, while Rajah is in the house. It will be too late soon!"

He was near her, very near, looking down at her. Suddenly she swayed toward him and the candle fell from her hands onto the grass... and she was in his arms, dizzy with the thrill of them around her, weak with the kisses that fell on her lips.

"Janet! Janet, my love..."

His lips were on hers, warm and soft... his arms were tightening around her. Between the kisses he gave, he whispered words of love.

"Kiss me, Janet... I love you..."

She returned his kisses, forgetting, forgetting everything except that she was in Blair's arms, she was kissing him, and she loved him.

"You love me, Janet?"

"Yes," she murmured, so low it might have been a sigh. With this she struggled to get away. Maurice... the message she must give...

"You must go right away. It will be too late soon for you."

"I can't go without you now, Janet. I can't."

"But I'm coming soon. As soon as Nita gets back. She's gone, and I can't leave without her. Don't you see you must go!"

"If you stay, I stay!"

"Blair... you have only a little while..." she thought of some lie he would believe. "...Rajah will kill you if you stay. He does not bother me. But I must wait for Nita. She is in danger, too. Go away now, and come back at daylight with your car for Nita and I. But do not come back before! I am safe enough... don't worry. I don't understand this..."

"Go now, we've lost too much time as it is!"

"Please, I am frightened for you..."

"Come more kiss!" and he caught her in his arms again. "Will you be safe?"

"Yes, it's only you I'm thinking about..."

She saw him run around the corner of the house, heard his footsteps in the grass, heard them getting fainter and fainter, as he ran...

She stood there for some time, dazed and weary, unshed tears in her eyes. The candle was out, lying in the grass. When she finally had strength to go into the house, she walked like a person drugged, drunk, staggering and stumbling...

In the kitchen at last. A lighted candle was standing on the table. Wearily she threw herself into the chair, bitter thoughts in her mind. She had sent Blair away; she would never see him again. When he came back at daylight she would be gone, gone with Maurice. Unless the car he expected did not come.

Something was sparking in the candle light. Something bright, vaguely, and without thinking, she moved her hand toward it. A string of beads. She held it up, seeing it, yet not seeing it. The stones were clear and gleamed yellow, blue and green in the flickering light. She thought she had never seen such beautiful stones... they looked like diamonds, but she could not tell...

They dropped with a tinkle on the table, from her inert fingers.

Footsteps coming in... she looked up. Nita, her eyes wide open, her lips tightly closed, walked past her, as if she did not see her; walked straight for the bedroom.

"Blair!" the girl called loudly. The woman did not stop. She evidently did not hear. Janet saw her lie down on the pallet beside the cot. She had not seen Janet, although her eyes were open... she had not heard, though Janet had called...

She was about to run to the cot, when voice stopped her. "I have your suitcases here... outside the door. You will want to dress. We'll be leaving in a few minutes!"

She glanced at the clock. It was nearly midnight...

WASHINGTON—Colonel Frank Knox's campaign for the Republican presidential campaign has reached the contribution-seeking stage. Letters have been received in Washington from friends of the Chicago newspaper publisher, asking their friends to help finance his drive.

Considered most significant is the fact that the senders are known Hooverites.

The existence of a tie-up between Knox and Hoover has been strongly suspected for some time, especially since the Chicagoan visited the former President in his home in Palo Alto.

Just before Congress adjourned, a story went around the Senate Republican cloak-room that at this Palo Alto meeting Hoover agreed to throw his support to Knox, in exchange for a promise to have the naming of two members of Knox's Cabinet of State and Secretary of the Treasury.

The name of Ogden L. Mills, strong-man of the Hoover regime was associated with the Treasury post.

Clerical Errors

The other day Brain Truster Ben Cohen received a formal invitation to become a member of the violently anti-administration American Liberty League.

Among those who extended the invitation were Irene W. Wadsworth, John J. Raskob, James W. Wadsworth, wealthy Republican Representative from New York, and John W. Davis, J. P. Morgan & Co. attorney.

Most of Cohen's time in the last two years has been spent in mauling legislation aimed against "gentlemen."

Now comes one of Huey Long's Share-the-Wealth clubs with an invitation to Joett Shouse, $36,000-a-year executive director of the American Liberty League, to enroll in its ranks.

An assistant of Shouse expressed confidence that this was a "clerical error."

Marvin McIntyre

The story now going the rounds that Marvin McIntyre, cadaverous and urbane guardian of the Presidential portal, is about to lose his job, probably is wet.

Roosevelt seldom fires anyone, though he has a habit of putting them in such uncomfortable spots that they are glad to ease quietly out of the picture. That may be the reason Mac did not accompany the President on his trip to Hyde Park.

In this particular case, however, it will take a lot of easing to shunt McIntyre to the side-lines.

Mrs. Roosevelt made some gentle hints in that direction. So also did daughter Anna Roosevelt Boettiger. But it did no good.

At heart the President is rather fond of his emaciated secretary. They used to know each other back in the days when Roosevelt was a dashing young Assistant of the Navy and Mac, as press relations officer, splashed his exploits all over the front pages.

And it is a fact that once the President forms a genuine friendship he does not easily relinquish it.

Lobby Alibi

After Mac was found at the sensational cocktail party in the room of the chief lobbyist of Associated Gas and Electric, the alibi was spread that getting the low-down from lobbyists is one of Mac's duties for the President.

This is a long stretch of the imagination. The truth is that Mac is a convivial soul who hates to refuse any invitation which includes old Bourbon, a good dinner and company of about his own intellectual level.

Mac's stomach is notorious. Some say it is made of the next thing to cast iron. He can consume more, and turn up for work fresher than almost any other official in the Capital. Many a lobbyist has thought he could drink Mac down.

THE CITY PARK PROJECT

(An Editorial)

TWO MONTHS AGO Circleville was enthused about a city park. A number of progressive-minded citizens interested themselves in the project, collected money, and secured FERA aid for its construction.

Today, if some immediate steps are not taken to revive this interest and a few more dollars collected to make the park a sure, financial success, the project is doomed to failure.

The Herald regrets to see the park project fail at this time because we feel that if Circleville doesn't build a park now, it will be many years before such a project is realized.

Leaders of the project have worked unceasingly to see their dream realized. Right now they're just $400 short of their $3,500 goal—the amount needed to purchase the site on Watt-st.

We understand that the city's business men for the most part have failed to respond to the plea for park funds. Some of them, and other residents, able to give, say they are withholding their contributions until the park is "a going concern." May we suggest that the park can't be "a going concern" if sufficient financial backing isn't first of all assured.

Every progressive city of Circleville's size either has a park or is making plans to build one. Circleville's children have never had a properly organized recreational center at which they might spend part of their leisure time. A park for Circleville would be a definite contribution to a finer type of physically, mentally, morally-trained youth.

Let's make the park project a success! Those of us who haven't fulfilled our pledges, do so at once. The rest of us, who haven't given, should do so now!

TO HONOR LAST SURVIVOR

It is somewhat early yet to prepare for a personal bicentenary to be celebrated in 1937, but the occasion for which congress is arranging is one of unusual importance. September 19, 1937, will mark the 200th anniversary of Charles Carroll, the last survivor of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Very properly the initiative for the approaching commemoration is in the hands of Senator Tydings of Maryland, the state from which Carroll hailed.

In appending his signature, "Charles Carroll of Carrollton," to the immortal document, this great man pledged not only his life and sacred honor but also the largest fortune in America to the success of the Revolution. He was held in high respect by George Washington and to the end of his days was revered by admiring fellow-countrymen for his zeal, fortitude and perseverance in his country's cause.

The Maryland Historical Society promises an observance two years hence which will attract the attention of the entire country.

You can tell a hen-pecked husband. He stands silent and miserable while his wife bawls out somebody.

Alas! If he has brains enough to make a good public official, he probably has money enough to make voters suspicious.

It was indeed a shock for the world to discover that the Ethiopian in the woodpile was none other than our old friend, Standard Oil.

Russia's fine-spun distinction between the communist party and the soviet government doesn't satisfy Secretary Hull, who knows a red herring when he sees one.

Hitler's slaves must eat more rhubarb, it is decreed, and may they get the bellyache.

Something for nothing: Joe Louis' share of the loot in the forthcoming Baer fight.

Motorists who drive into trees probably don't giveadam, but something must be done to save the trees.

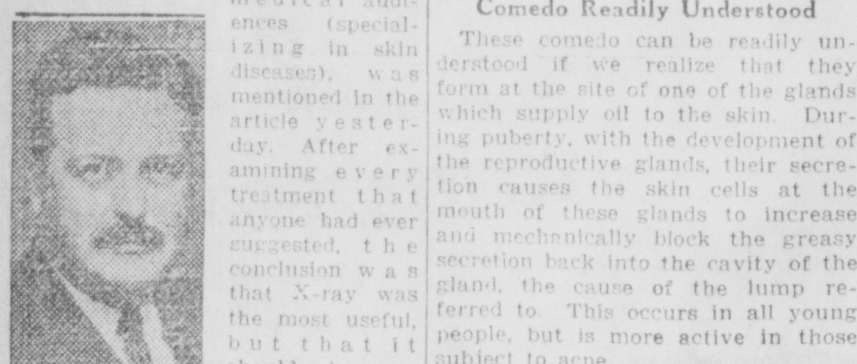

The ultimate in faith is to get an unusually big electric bill and still believe the meter is right.

Feeding strikers at public expense isn't a new idea. Aren't the farmers paid for not working?

Now the big problem of Democracy is to keep people from judging it by its crack-pot friends.

X-ray Found Most Useful In the Treatment of Acne

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D. THE AUTHORITY review of the subject of acne (that eruption so common on the face in young people) before one of our most learned medical authorities (specializing in skin diseases), was mentioned in the article yesterday. After examining every treatment that anyone had ever suggested, the conclusion was that X-ray was the most useful, but that it should be reserved for those patients over 18 years of age.

think "outgrow" the disease before that, which should be a comfort.

The subject is of such wide interest, however, that we can afford to consider other aspects of the case. The most complete investigation of the incidence of the disease was by Block, who examined over 4,000 school children between the ages of 6 and 19. Their results showed that 64 per cent had a tendency to the disease (had comedones—see below). Fully developed acne was present in 5 per cent of the girls and 20 per cent of the boys.

That is pretty high. When a disease affects over a fourth of all young people it must be a matter of considerable interest.

What essentially is the disease? When one examines carefully one of the pimples that form the eruption, the first thing noted is that it goes through various stages. A "pimple" implies that pus has formed. But that is only the last stage in the process. First there is

By REX JARDIN

CHAPTER 43

THE VOICE had said she never would see Blair any more—and that only if she married this unknown person speaking in the dark would Blair be permitted to depart alive.

Never see Blair any more! Ridiculous that she loved him when she had known him so short a time, thought she. Ridiculous. Surely love could not come so quickly!

Janet had had little experience with love. The years she had spent with her father had brought no love to her. She had had no time for love. And the years after were busy years. Men in her office, yes. Plenty of them; men who seemed attracted to her, but were frightened by her seriousness, by the duty she had put forward for herself. Janet had not yet learned how to play. . . .

"How will I know that you'll keep your promise?" The question came slowly, hesitantly. Thoughts spoken aloud.

The answer came readily. "I'll direct Rodman to his car, and let him go. After he goes, we'll go. I've already arranged to have a car come for us from Vancouver. It will be here around midnight. Nita may stay in the house. I'll provide for her. She may have the house if she wants it. We'll never return here. She'll take care of the . . . lady in the east tower room. In case you do not believe I have a car coming from Vancouver, I'll tell you that I have my own direct telephone line here, which is located some miles from the house. I receive no incoming calls."

"I must have more proof of your promise than that."

A moment of silence and the voice continued. "I'll let you give Rodman directions to the car, but I'll be near you to hear everything you say. His car is within the gate, on the right hand side of the road. It is concealed about fifty feet in, on a hidden road . . . a road that is marked by two tall trees at the entrance. It's easy to find. The car is in running order. Will you go now to the stable? You'd better take a light."

"And Rajah?"

"I'll whistle for Rajah. He'll stay inside with me."

Janet found some matches on the table, and lighted a candle. Her hands were steady and she was much calmer now. She had promised to stay willingly with this man she had never seen . . . willingly. Nita had said he was not like other men.

Willingly with this mad man, who had talked to her just now. . . .

Holding the candle high above her head, she went out the back door, and found herself in the garden. The white flowers on Miss Bolesvaine's grave were faintly visible in the moonlight.

Quickly she went around the house and saw the big stable ahead of her. A snarl greeted her. Rajah was still there, but he made no move toward her.

"Mr. Rodman!" she called softly.

"Yes?" Her bravery left her for an instant when she heard his voice, eager and excited. She could not see him, but she made out something white high up. The bandage around his head. . . .

"Miss Lord . . . Janet, I've been waiting for you to come! Oh! The hours have dragged!"

"Your car I found out is within the gate, just a little way on the right hand side of the road . . . hidden in a road marked by two tall trees. . . ." Janet spoke swiftly. She was about to go on, when she heard a snarl whistle behind her. . . . The whistle she knew came from Rajah's master. She looked back but could see nothing. Then Rajah bounded past her, round the house, and she heard the kitchen door open. Maurice was in the house, standing at one of the back windows she was sure.

"You can go now . . . Rajah won't bother you. He has gone in. . . ."

The sliding of bolts, and Blair ran to her side.

"Is it safe for us, Janet?" he panted.

"Safe for you . . . but I can't go yet. Wait down in Bolesvaine for me. I'll manage to get there. . . ."

"I can't go without you!"

"You must! Otherwise I can't get away!"

"I don't understand. . . ."

"Quickly, while Rajah is in the house. It will be too late soon!"

He was near her, very near, looking down at her. Suddenly she swayed toward him and the candle fell from her hands onto the grass.

And she was in his arms, dizzy with the thrill of them around her, weak with the kisses that fell on her lips.

"Janet! Janet, my love. . . ."

His lips were on hers, warm and soft . . . his arms were tightening around her. Between the kisses he gave, he whispered words of love.

"Kiss me, Janet . . . I love you."

"She returned his kisses, forgetting Maurice, forgetting everything except that she was in Blair's arms, she was kissing him, and she loved him."

"You love me, Janet?"

"Yes," she murmured, so low it might have been a sigh. With this she struggled to get away. Maurice, the message she must give. . . .

"You must go right away. It will be too late soon for you."

"I can't go without you now, Janet. I can't."

"But I'm coming soon. As soon as Nita gets back. She's going, and I can't leave without her. Don't you see you must go!"

"If you stay, I stay!"

"Blair . . . you have only a little while . . ." she thought of some lie he would believe. . . . "Rajah will kill you if you stay. He does not bother me. But I must wait for Nita. She is in danger, too. Go away now, and come back at daylight with your car for Nita and me! But do not come back before! I am safe enough . . . don't worry."

"I don't understand this. . . ."

"Go now, we've lost too much time as it is."

"Sweet!"

"Please, I am frightened for you."

"One more kiss!" and he caught her in his arms again. "Will you be safe?"

"Yes, it's only you I'm thinking about. . . ."

She saw him run around the corner of the house, heard his footsteps in the grass, heard them getting fainter and fainter, as he ran. . . .

She stood there for some time, dazed and weary, unshed tears in her eyes. The candle was out, lying in the grass. When she finally had strength to go into the house, she walked like a person drugged, drunk, staggering and stumbling. . . .

In the kitchen at last. A lighted candle was standing on the table. Weakly she threw herself into the chair, bitter thoughts in her mind. She had sent Blair away; she would never see him again. When he came back at daylight she would be gone, gone with Maurice. Unless the car he expected did not come.

Something was sparking in the candle light. Something bright. Vaguely, and without thinking, she moved her hand toward it. A string of beads. She held it up, seeing it, yet not seeing it. The stones were clear and gleamed yellow, blue and green in the flickering light. She thought she had never seen such beautiful stones. . . . they looked like diamonds but she could not tell. . . .

They dropped with a tinkle on the table, from her inert fingers.

Footsteps coming in. . . . she looked up. Nita, her eyes wide open, her lips tightly closed, walked past her, as if she did not see her; walked straight for the bedroom.

"Nita!" the girl called loudly. The woman did not stop. She evidently did not hear. Janet saw her lie down on the pallet beside the cot. She had not seen Janet, although her eyes were open. . . . she had not heard, though Janet had called. . . .

She was about to run to the cot, when a voice stopped her. . . .

"I have your suitcases here. . . . outside the door. You will want to dress. We'll be leaving in a few minutes."

She glanced at the clock. It was nearly midnight.

15 YEARS AGO

Rebecca Pritchard, 17, and Ebenezer Speakman, 34, were drowned when a cloudburst hit Brimstone creek near Adelphi.

A daughter was born Sept.

But none succeeded.

However, it is doubtful whether Mac is able to give his chief in the White House much lobbying low-down. Probably they get much more Presidential low-down from him.

Silent Letters

FERA's Bruce McClure doesn't let a letter from a big-shot upset him any more.

When he first became Secretary to Federal Relief, he was given a file of letters to answer. Important letters, from Governors and members of Congress. Conscientiously, Bruce stayed late into the night sorting the letters, getting ready to dictate. He put some in piles on his desk, others in piles on various waste baskets about the room.

When he came to work again in the morning, he found the room had been cleaned and the letters destroyed.

He was dismayed, horrified. He was positive he would be fired. But days passed and nothing happened. Nothing ever happened. He never heard from any of the letter writers.

That experience gave McClure an idea. Silent treatment, he says, settles many an issue.

The chewing gum industry dates back to 1860, when the original business was begun on an outlay of $55.

One of the finest athletes in Ohio history was dead today—He is Pat Roubush, 22, quarterback for Miami university's football team of 1932 and 1933—Roubush died in Christ hospital, Cincinnati, of an infection resulting from a bruised elbow suffered when he fell during a tennis game in Boston.

Athlete and Student Roubush was a native of Oxford and besides being a stellar athlete was a student. He won election to Phi Beta Kappa as a junior with an average of 3.9 out of a possible 4, the highest ranking of any Miami candidate. He captained the Miami team for two years and in 1932 piloted the Big Red through a perfect season to a BAA title.

Great Field General Pat Roubush was not the greatest football player, but as a field general, keen-minded and fair to all the athletes he directed on the field of play, he was never surpassed. He was a tradition at Miami.

5 Quarterbacks Vie for Schmidt's No. 1 Position This is the fifth in a series of exclusive articles describing leading candidates for the 1935 Ohio State football team. Coach Francis Schmidt's potential quarterback material is surveyed.

Stanley Pincura, rugged Lorain product, brilliant Tippy Dye, Daney's "little man with the big brain" who crept into the heart of Ohio gridiron last year; and Frankie Fisch, big pile-driving Mansfielder, are the veterans. Two 1934 yearlings—Jim McDonald of Springfield and "Jumping Joe" Williams, Barberton, two of the best-appearing Ohio Frosh stars in years—will undoubtedly give the veteran trio a battle for the job.

To Write for You COACH HARRY MEHRE Georgia's Brilliant Grid Leader to Report on Dixie Football Doings

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first of a series of sketches of famous football coaches who will interpret for The Herald readers the progress this season of leading football teams in their sections. Watch for Mehre's first story on southern and southwest-ern football.

Harry Mehre came up out of Huntington, Ind., to Notre Dame just as Rockne football first flowered into greatness. The Irish team roster glittered with such names as George Gipp, Hunk Anderson, Tom Lieb and others. But the quiet kid from Huntington fought for a place on those great teams, got it and held it.

The qualities which made Mehre center on famous Notre Dame football teams and a star and captain for two years of Irish basketball quints were the ones which made Mehre a highly successful football coach after graduation in 1922.

Harvard and Princeton are Yale's traditional rivals but the great "menace" in the life of every foot-ball loving Eli is Harry Mehre. Mehre's University of Georgia grid machines have whipped Yale eleven for five successive seasons!

Mehre's first coaching assignment came with St. Thomas college of St. Paul, Minn. So successful was he that when the noted George Woodruff retired as Georgia coach in 1925, Mehre was given the desirable post. He clicked immediately.

So respected did Georgia football become under Mehre that Yale broke an ancient rule (confining "road" games only to Harvard and Princeton) to come to Athens, Ga., and dedicate with a game Georgia's then brand new Sanford stadium. This was in 1929.

In the memory of this writer Yale's Bulldogs have gone from their kennels on only one other occasion to Chicago to honor their illustrious alumnus, Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Also highly gratifying to Georgians is the fact that under Mehre Georgia has lost but one game to her greatest rival—Georgia Tech.

In Athens, Mehre has found renaissance as well as football fame. The former Miss Hattie Kilpatrick of Athens is now Mrs. Mehre and they have a son and daughter. Dixie observers predict another fine season for Georgia in South-ern conference play this year. Next—Clark Shaughnessy of Chicago.

CHICAGO CUBS PROVE THREAT Grimm Pushes Team Within Game of Top; Carleton and French Winners.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Charley Grimm—banjo-playing humorist of the Cubs must be enjoying a few quiet chuckles today at the expense of Frankie Fisch of the Cards and Bill Terry of the Giants.

You may recall that these two have said repeatedly the National league race lies only between the Cards and Giants and that Charley's Cubs were not even to be taken seriously.

Therefore, it must be highly amusing to Charley to take a look at the standing today and find his Cubs only one game back of the pace-setting Cards and two ahead of the Giants.

It may be true this Cubs lack pitching. And they may not have sufficient reserves. Nor is their offense. Nor field well enough. But somehow or other they keep winning and they still pay off in results on the field and not on paper.

The Cubs are proving themselves just as tough and hard to take as advertised on their own lot and they'll probably be a lot tougher before they become any softer.

They may not have much pitching—on paper—but I note they had enough yesterday to take a doubleheader from the Braves, 3-2 and 2-1. Tex Carleton held the Braves to four hits in the opener and after his mates gave him a had enough to hold it. It isn't good pitching, it will be until something better turns up.

Meanwhile the Cards were being knocked off again by Phils, 4-3, thus making Frankie Fisch's birthday very miserable indeed.

45 OHIO MEN BEGIN DRILLS; TWO SESSIONS

Shift of Nardi to Halfback Seen; Two Daily Practices Scheduled.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 10.—Eight and early today approximately 45 Ohio State football hopefuls met out on the practice field and started work for the 1935 grid campaign.

Coach Francis Schmidt lost little time in getting the team started in the first drill of the season. Members of the Scarlet Scourge were told to line up on the field at 8:30 a. m.

"We might as well get off to an early start today because we'll have numerous interruptions. The numerous interruptions meant everything from well-wishers, newspaper photographers, to curious faculty and student body members.

Plan Second Session

The early morning practice was to last until 10:30 when the photographers were to be given their big chance. Following lunch, the Buckeyes were to take the field for their second session of the day.

The Scarlet Scourge will continue two daily practices until Oct. 1 when school convenes. Late yesterday the Ohio State coach said:

"Me and Ernie (Ernie Godfrey, line coach) are anxious to get the boys started. We have plenty of work to do and there's lots of shifting to be done before these guys know what positions they're going to play."

Among the contemplated shifts is moving Dick Nardi, Cleveland sophomore, from fullback to right half. Merle Wendt, Middletown, is expected to move over to left end and Trevor Rees, Dover, to the right flank.

These are only a couple changes Schmidt contemplates. Before the practice sessions go very far, undoubtedly there will be numerous other changes.

Captain Not Present Until late yesterday, Capt. Zivie 1934.

LANDRUM GETS LINE ON GRID JOB HOPEFULS

Scrimmage Monday Brings Much Action; Regulation Game Friday.

Hard scrimmages to learn whether his charges can really take what is on the gridiron menu this fall are planned every day this week by Coach Jack Landrum of the high school. A real session was held Monday evening with Landrum taking part himself, first on one side then on the other.

It is planned to have a regulation game Friday afternoon between two squads. Thirty minute halves will be played. "After this scrimmage we will know just what our boys can stand," the coach said today.

Ruff Joins Squad

The squad was augmented by the addition of several athletes who were not out last week. Red Ruff, hefty youth from north of this city, was in uniform and showed good conditioning despite lack of practice. He is counted on to hold down a line position. He has a lot of fire and pep and may help the forward wall immensely.

Johnny Griffith still has a sore shoulder but is expected to again join scrimmage sessions late this week.

Landrum is beginning to get his boys lined up the way he wants them and should be about able to pick a tentative lineup early next week. The Groveport game is only a week from Friday so much work is yet to be done.

SAUNDERS, BRIGGS

DEFEAT ASHVILLE

Shadel Saunders and Gene Briggs put their talents together and defeated an Asheville baseball team Sunday 2 to 1. Saunders gave only three hits while Briggs' hit in the ninth inning broke up the ball game.

The game was ticketed for the county championship and was played in New Holland.

All the boys on the Asheville team were residents of that village and Bloomfield and Commercial Point. They included McGlone, Trego, Roof, Neff, Steinbrook, Wellington, Wagner, Cook, Pettibone, Tustin and B. Wellington.

JOHNNY GILL SOLD

TO CHICAGO CUBS

CHICAGO, Sept. 10—Johnny Gill, towering slugger of the Minneapolis Millers, has been purchased by the Chicago Cubs for "cash and players," it was learned today.

Gill, will be kept on the Association team until the season closes, according to the terms of the deal, but will be available for the Cubs if they get into the world's series.

Standing 6 feet 3 inches weighing 190 pounds, the 28-year-old star, is hitting a .361 clip and yesterday poled out his 41st homer of the season.

OUR YESTERDAYS—When Nurmi Set World Marks Running in Distance Events

Typical smile of Nurmi in action on the track.

THE UNITED STATES has produced many stars in track and field competition, but America has yet to find a runner to equal or better the marathon feats of a little Finnish athlete who will stand as one of the greatest track performers of the twentieth century. He is Paavo Nurmi, who carved out a unique niche in the sports hall of fame back in the twenties. Nurmi today holds five world's records for distance runs, the result of his sensational exhibitions on the track in the third decade. Nurmi chalked up his first world's mark in 1921 when he finished the five-mile run in 24 minutes six and one-half seconds. Later he set international records in the two-mile, six-mile and 10-mile events, and negotiated 11 miles, 1,948 yards in one hour's running time. A consistent winner, Nurmi often wore a wrist watch on the track, checking himself as he ran. By doing so, it is said of Nurmi that he knew what time he intended to make in the race. Nurmi was a great eater of fish, and often ate nothing else while training for the big races in which he participated.

Coach Earl (Red) Blaik, right, says chances for a victory over Eli are good this year, and Capt. John J. Kenney, left, agrees that this will be the year.

MILLERS NEARER TO LEAGUE TITLE

COLUMBUS, Sept. 10—Minneapolis virtually had the American association baseball championship in "the bag" today after the Millers gained a full game on the second-place Indianapolis, winning from Kansas City, 10 to 4, while the Indians suffered a 5 to 4 reverse by Columbus.

Johnny Gill's forty-second homer of the season and brilliant relief pitching by Walter Tanneher marked the Minneapolis victory.

In the only other A. A. game, Milwaukee defeated St. Paul, 13 to 7, Toledo and Louisville were routed out of their season finale.

It is shameful and shocking, the extent to which men appointed to high offices put their kin on the payroll. — Representative J. R. Mitchell, Tennessee.

The champ weighed 127 and Zivic 132½.

New Morgan Power

Henry Sturgis Morgan

Wall Street is watching the career of 35-year-old Henry Sturgis Morgan, above, son of J. P. Morgan, who 12 years ago went to work at a mail agent in his father's office for $15 a week. Announcement that young Morgan would be a partner in forming an investment banking firm with other junior members of J. P. Morgan & Company aroused comment that the Glass-Steagel law had failed evidently to stop banking groups from underwriting securities.

WEISS' MOVE IS PUZZLING TO RELATIVES

Believe Oppression of People in State Might Have Caused Assassination.

EDITOR'S NOTE: What prompt to Dr. Carl Austin Weiss, Jr., had a young eye specialist, senior student graduate of a famous Ohio medical school, father of a three-month-old child, to shoot Senator Huey P. Long also cost him his own life. Was it because of a political move prompted by Long that might cost Weiss' father-in-law, Judge R. H. Pavy, a judge on the bench, his judgeship in St. Louis parish? Was it a conviction that only death could end a political and judicially unparalleled in American history? Or was Weiss mentally unbalanced? The following series of interviews, gathered by International News Service, from members of Weiss' family and close associates shed some light on the mystery that young Weiss, his lips sealed in death, cannot explain.

AN UNWISE DOUBLE

THE GREAT majority of business doubles are made upon guess rather than upon defensive strength, as was the case with this hand which I dealt a few evenings ago. Had I full confidence in my partner's judgment I would have redoubled after the first trick to our score. Why East doubled, after the bidding showed only a single trick in his hand, I never shall know. The subject must have been too painful to risk inquiry at the time.

Even if clubs offered a poor looking suit, it had to be bid first, to show that my hand was divided 5-4-4-0 among the suits. Bidding went: South, 1-Club; West, 1-Heart; North, 1-No Trump; East, 2-Hearts; South, 2-Spades; North, 3-Spades, indicating that suit as the best for us to play, but I had to show my third biddable suit. South, 4-Diamonds; North, 4-Spades, as expected, East, 4-Hearts. It is hard to understand why North did not redouble, but probably because the opening bid had not forced.

Declarer ruffed the Ace of hearts. West was too good a player to have made that opening lead had she thoroughly dissected the bidding. Doubtless she then would have led a trump, even if the same result would have followed.

Three rounds of trumps followed, picking up all opposing spades, and leaving a long spade and top heart in dummy. Dummy's 10 of diamonds held the next trick. My J of that suit held the sixth trick. The 3 of clubs held the next trick. Opposing cards were admirably suited for my purpose. The 4 of clubs was led. West played low. Dummy's 10 brought out East's Ace at the death trick, leaving the dealer in a bad position to lead. East had no spades. If a heart was led dummy's K would take the trick. The K of clubs would clean up that suit. The only reason a lead left was a diamond, and East led the 8 of that suit.

Tricks 9 and 10 were won with the Q and Ace of diamonds, dropping all opposing cards of the suit. On the latter dummy's 10 of hearts was discarded. Dummy was put a win with K of clubs and the K of hearts and Q of spades completed the small win always in the hands, giving me tricks above contract.

Even had East held the A-Q of clubs and had the K of diamonds been in the West hand the contract could have been fulfilled. Barreling accident the defenders never had a possible chance to defeat 3-Strages.

By DR. F. O. PAVY
Uncle by marriage of Dr. Carl Weiss, Jr.

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 10.—Dr. Weiss was an intense and earnest young man. He had a deep feeling for humanity. He took deeply to heart what he believed to be a wrong type of government in our state.

He kept this pretty much to himself and no one in the family knew of any plan to kill Senator Long. We are afraid his conviction preyed on his mind until it became unbalanced. He was deeply religious and may have felt he was martyring himself for Louisiana. Else how could he have left his wife and baby whom he loved so well?

I can't believe he did it because of the bill aimed at my brother, Judge Pavy.

The judge and I had talked this over and laughed about it. We didn't think the judge would lose his seat.

There's been talk that Dr. Weiss may have been the member of a group of men who had determined to kill Senator Long by lot. That's ridiculous.

But a prominent Baton Rouge physician associate of Dr. Weiss, whose name is withheld for professional reasons.

I am convinced Dr. Weiss was hopelessly insane. I believe Dr. Weiss was eating out his heart because he thought Senator Long's dictatorship of Louisiana was an oppression on the people, and that he thought on the subject so long that his mind snapped.

D. T. & I. DEATH TRAP ATTACKED

UREANA, Sept. 10. To eliminate a "death trap" where the D. T. and I. railroad crosses the U. S. highway 36 at St. Paris, Governor David H. Moore today requested S. D. Ruddiman, president of the railroad, to send safety experts here to confer with officials of the county.

The request was made as a result of the deaths of Lawrence Taylor, who was killed last Saturday, and Harold Dean, May 15. Both were killed when their automobiles crashed into the side of a local freight train blocking the crossing.

Moore said he would propose removal of the depot erection of safety signals, and other safety measures.

It does not intimate that the Al-mighty is on his side. However, Ethiopia need not despair. William Holmboe, told the same way about it but tried to learn that he was in error.

2 OFFICERS FACING TRIAL

Pomeroy Men Give Bond After Being Accused of Murder in Death Raid.

POMEROY, Sept. 10. Sheriff Roscoe Fowler and Deputy Hank Young, accused of murder as the outgrowth of a slaying in a liquor raid, were free under $500 bond each today following their arraignment before Justice J. W. McCulloch.

Both Sheriff Fowler and Deputy Young pleaded not guilty to the charges which were contained in a warrant signed by Thomas Holter, father of Herschel Holter, 24, the slaying victim. The warrant mentioned no specific degree of murder.

Former Judge F. W. Crow represented both Sheriff Fowler and Deputy Young.

Herschel Holter was fatally shot last August 11 while fleeing from the officers. Sheriff Fowler said the shooting was accidental, explaining that he fired in the air to frighten the youth into obeying a command to halt. The gun jammed, Sheriff Fowler said, and when he lowered the weapon it suddenly discharged.

Young Holter was taken to a hospital by the officers and Deputy Young gave him blood for a transfusion in an effort to save the man's life. No formal verdict was given by Coroner W. E. Ewing in connection with the shooting.

The elder Holter had been charged with unlawful operation of a liquor still but Sheriff Fowler dropped the charge after young Holter's death.

Pomeroy Men Give Bond After Being Accused of Murder in Death Raid.

POMEROY, Sept. 10.—Sheriff Roscoe Fowler and Deputy Hank Young, accused of murder as the outgrowth of a slaying in a liquor raid, were free under $500 bond each today following their arraignment before Justice J. W. McCulloch.

Both Sheriff Fowler and Deputy Young pleaded not guilty to the charges which were contained in a warrant signed by Thomas Holter, father of Herschel Holter, 24, the slaying victim. The warrant mentioned no specific degree of murder.

Former Judge F. W. Crow represented both Sheriff Fowler and Deputy Young.

Herschel Holter was fatally shot last August 11 while fleeing from the officers. Sheriff Fowler said the shooting was accidental, explaining that he fired in the air to frighten the youth into obeying a command to halt. The gun jammed, Sheriff Fowler said, and when he lowered the weapon it suddenly discharged.

Young Holter was taken to a hospital by the officers and Deputy Young gave his blood for a transfusion in an effort to save the man's life. No formal verdict was given by Coroner W. E. Ewing in connection with the shooting.

The elder Holter had been charged with unlawful operation of a liquor still but Sheriff Fowler dropped the charge after young Holter's death.

Reporter Tells Coroner Jury the Story of Killings

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 10.—The first official picture of the assassination of Senator Huey P. Long, which also resulted in the quick death of his assassin, Dr. Carl Weiss, lay in part in the hands of a reporter before a coroner's jury today.

A New Orleans newspaperman, C. E. Frampton, who stepped into the capital corridor in the slits were fired Sunday night, that placed a pontical figure in the balance, declared that Weiss' body was performed by himself as he lay face down on the marble floor.

Frampton told the coroner's jury: "I heard a shot, A. I. Weiss fell."

CHANDLER LEADING RHEA IN KENTUCKY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 10.—Counters tabulating the votes cast in the Kentucky runoff primary Saturday returned to their ledgers today, but the results appeared certain.

A. B. Chandler, 37-year-old lieutenant governor, had amassed 18,000 lead over Thomas S. Rhea, state administration candidate for governor.

As it turned out it was Rhea's own political maneuvering that defeated him. In February Governor Ruby Laffoon left the state and the young lieutenant governor immediately called a special session of the legislature and passed an act that Democratic nominees should be chosen by a primary. The Governor and Rhea returned in time to add to the bill a proviso that there should be a runoff primary in case no candidate got a majority of all votes in the first primary.

Rhea won by 13,500 in August, but all other candidates passed his total and the runoff followed and apparently has defeated him.

DUCE ORDERS MOBILIZATION

Signal Alarms To All Troops Scheduled; Italians Leaving Addis Ababa.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Premier Mussolini today ordered trial mobilization in the near future of all the military and civil forces in Italy and her colonies, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch stated.

It was believed the mobilization would coincide with the beginning of the expected hostilities in East Africa, Exchange Telegraph said.

"On the day appointed," the order was reported to read, "an order for assembly will be issued with a series of signal alarms by all authorities of the country, both from the powers of combatant Fascists and from civil authorities. Sirens and drums will be used in the center of all cities and also in the country."

ADDIS ABABA, Sept. 10.—Close upon an Italian order for withdrawal of consulates from the interior and border cities of Ethiopia, Italian officials began leaving the capital itself today.

Commandatore Altizio Bazziani, secretary to the Italian legation specializing in eastern affairs, and considered the most important figure of the legation staff, was among those departing. Six nuns also left an Italian mission here.

The government announced officially there was no truth in reports published abroad stating Emperor Haile Selassie had instructed his Geneva delegation to reject all solutions yet offered regarding Ethiopia.

'BOILER' MEETING NOT HELD MONDAY

The meeting of a committee of city councilmen with the county commissioners to ask county aid on the new boiler for the Memorial hall heating plant failed to materialize Monday afternoon.

The committee failed to show up. Council adjourned at its last meeting until Wednesday night so a report of the committee could be received and they could take further action on the boiler problem. They hope to rush plans through for the new unit so it can be installed before cold weather starts.

Although the commissioners did not talk with any councilmen about the project they believe there is no fund through which they could add the city on the boiler purchase.

Under the terms of an old lease the city agreed to furnish light, heat and repairs on the building and pay the janitor's salary for the use of the library section of the building.

The blast blew off the roof and part of the side walls of the building. Crawford suffered severe burns.

Reporter Tells Coroner Jury the Story of Killings

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 10—

The first official picture of the assassination of Senator Huey P. Long, which also resulted in the quick death of his assailant, Dr. Carl Weiss, lay in partial detail before a coroner's jury today.

A New Orleans newspaperman, C. E. Frampton, who stepped into the capitol corridor as the shots were fired Sunday night that placed a political chaper in the balance, declared that Weiss' body was perforated by bullets as he lay face down on the marble floor.

Frampton told the coroner's jury:

Saw Men Struggling

"I heard a shot. As I opened the door (into the corridor) I saw Senator Long walking down the corridor grasping his side. As I stepped through the door I saw two men struggling, Murphy Rodden (Long's bodyguard) and a man later identified as Dr. Carl Weiss. Then half a dozen men began firing at Weiss."

Q—How much time lapsed between the first shot and the time Weiss fell?

A—I couldn't estimate it. It was practically a continuous action.

Q—As Rodden opened fire, Dr. Weiss fell?

A—That's correct.

Q—Were any of the so-called "Long bodyguards" there?

A—I recognized a half dozen known to me as bodyguards.

Q—How many shots did Rodden fire at Weiss?

A—I couldn't say definitely, but several.

Q—Were the other men who were behind Rodden firing too?

A—Yes.

Q—Was Dr. Weiss on the floor when the others began shooting?

A—Yes. He had slumped down with the gun in his hand.

Frampton said he did not see the firing of the shot that struck Senator Long.

63 Holes in Body

Coroner Thomas B. Bird said Weiss' body "was found to have 63 bullet holes on the front, and 29 on the back of the body, two in the head, one penetrating the left eye and the other the nose."

Q—It was impossible to tell which of the bodyguard's wounds were entrances and which exits," he added.

The inquest was to be resumed at 2 p. m. today.

Such a third party movement as Huey intended starting would be calculated to hurt the Democrats more than the Republicans.

But the leader had to be Huey himself. Dr. Townsend is too old. Father Coughlin is a cleric whose robes constitute an automatic barrier to political leadership. With Huey gone, the leftists scan the political horizon to find it pretty well deserted so far as effectual leadership is concerned. Out of the ashes may arise an insurgent Messiah, but nobody would discern him today.

GREENFIELD, Sept. 10—Harry Garrison, native of Madison-co and former Clarksburg resident, died in the hospital Sunday night of injuries received when struck by an automobile.

STUDENTS MOURN SENATOR'S DEATH

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 10—Louisiana State university, the pet project of Sen. Huey P. Long, was stunned today as word of the senator's death reached the campus.

"What will become of my L. S. U. boys and girls now?" were the senator's last words as death approached. And the question remained unanswered on the campus, where the faculty members were gathered for the opening of the school less than ten days away and the football players, Sen. Long's pride and joy, were going through their training period.

For seven years, L. S. U. has had the first thoughts of Sen. Long. When he became governor, one of his first acts was to set about building up the school.

At that time the school was small, with only about 500 or 600 students. The football team was conducted in a haphazard manner.

Today L. S. U. ranks as one of the best equipped schools in the south its football team was among the best, and enrollment this year was expected to go beyond 4,000 students, most of them boys and girls from the farms of the state.

Despite the lack of funds, the Division of Aid for the Aged is preparing to add 4,000 to the rolls this month. Applications for this additional number have been approved and awards will be made as soon as definite action is taken by the legislators.

Mr. Herrodin went into conference with Gov. Martin L. Davey as soon as he was informed of the situation by the state auditor. He urged the governor to summon the legislature at the earliest possible date and to include in his call not only the need for funds for August and September but for an appropriation to finish out the year. The division needs $5,300,000 approximately to pay pensions for the balance of the year.
